6/7/17 case specificity in naming:

As we all may know: Email address are never case specific nor render '.' so j.t.l@laf.land and JTL@laf.land or jtl@laf.land are analogous.

Http requests are not similar: canse specificity can be enforced in various ways: wikipedia enforces case specificity in its urls : this can be done with a .htaccess for example.

Noteworthy: ssl certificates for encryption does not support case specificity and authorized both lowercase and upppercase with combinations : were left open:

Subdomains however are case specific: can similar (case insensitive domains share a cert since- specificity is ambiguous: or and how would one obtain separate certs for two subdomains that differ only in case sensitivity?

For this reason I suggest always lowercase : and for example: for clarity, in naming, know the domain <https://mccaskill.democrat> is the base but enforce case specificity in various ways, i.e., keywords, canonical, og:url twitter:url

Such as McCaskill.democrat or even <https://McCaskill.democrat>

But importantly, stick to convention and use lowercase in official registration documents and records, such as cname records.
