

Along with our 52 platforms, secure encrypted services, we present a new message. The message is: Why do we rally? Where are the working sessions? Where are we organizing?

Huge rallies are traditionally important moments, huge feats of organization and planning highly organized times and choreographed, and rehearsed, undoubtedly rehearsed. And the appeal of hearing that same speech. We like seeing each other being there in the moment - the excitement.

But where are those progressive and democratic working groups? What could we accomplish as a body, with all the energy of a rally- focus on community outreach- environmental preservation- a walk for peace- ... What if we broke up into unitized community bodies and constructively, came to consensus, proposed ideas, discusses strategy... What else could we accomplish?

Focusing our efforts is exciting, engaging and investing. Breaking away from the traditional model is safe, and will lead to unknown great outcomes- we have it in us as a party.

The most noticeable element of the entire endeavour of all campaigns, including the care campaign this masthead is the moose icon, the progressive moose, icon of the progressive party as seen in Vermont, (having a balance of conservative and liberal blending into the progressive character, although this is a deformation of the traditional icon of the democratic donkey, it is crucial necessary and patient. pointed, - a reverberation, a reinvigoration a revitalization, and truly the better for strong, mature is the moose, weak, infertile and subjective is the mule or donkey.

And I take no great pleasure in saying this, but I take pride in my party, the progressive party, as it stands we are open arms to be Democrats as you are.
